The Weeping Woman

The night was pitch dark. There wasn't a speck of light. The moon seemed to hide behind the clouds. Adalberto was on his way home all alone. It was exactly midnight. At that moment the moon appeared and Adalberto saw her. It was a woman dressed spotless white, wearing a veil over her face. When my uncle tried to help her, she started to walk towards the river and saw she was actually floating. When they reach the river, the woman rose her arms which were now empty and she let out one last bloodcurdling screech.

Ahhh my children! and she vanished into the stream. When he told my aunt what happened, she said to him, you know what? You were home late, so you ran into "La Llorona".

La Llorona is a spirit of a woman that is crying for her children.
